Washington SmartCEO Announces 2012 Fast Growth Companies
Federated IT's CEO Kyle von Bucholz honored

January 23, 2012 - Federated Information Technologies, a leading provider of technical and professional solutions to the Department of Homeland Security, Department of Defense and the Intelligence Community, announced today that it was recognized by the Washington SmartCEO magazine for its rapid growth. This marks the second year in a row that Federated CEO Kyle von Bucholz was ranked among the top 50 leaders of the fastest growing companies in the greater Washington area.

The Future 50 program recognizes the 50 fastest-growing companies in the Greater Washington area based on employee and revenue growth. This year's Future 50 winners collectively employ 30,000 people and generate over $11.7 Billion in revenue. In addition to the Future 50 companies, SmartCEO also recognized Emerging Growth winning companies under $10 million in revenue and Blue Chip winning companies, with excess of $150 million, or more, in revenue. Washington SmartCEO magazine, in partnership with Clifton Gunderson LLP, announced the publication's seventh annual Future 50 winners, debuting in the January 2012 issue.

 SmartCEO magazine reports that "Over the past three years – through the heart of the recession – these companies have increased their revenue by 74 percent and expanded employee rosters by 72 percent… These companies represent the future of the region's economy, are exemplary leaders in business and the community and each generated in excess of $5 million in annual revenue. They are steadily growing their companies while remaining true to their missions to provide exceptional products and services to their customers."

"This award is the reflection of a team effort" Said Kyle von Bucholz, Federated IT's CEO, when reacting to the award. "We have an outstanding group of individuals working to accomplish the mission of our company. Without them we would not have been able to accomplish such amazing growth."
